Footnotes Category:Virtual sex fictionDisposable absorbent articles, or diapers, have long been used to collect and retain urine and feces. These articles have typically had reusable and disposable components. The reusable components have included reusable backsheets, reusable topsheets, and reusable pants and spares with elastic leg cuffs. Disposable components have included a topsheet, a backsheet, a fluid-impervious bodyside liner, and an absorbent core or chassis that can be plugged and replaced. The absorbent core or chassis typically includes a top barrier sheet and a backsheet. Many absorbent products include one or more breathable topsheets. These topsheets are typically used to help regulate the flow of air through the product to help promote drying and cooling of the body of the wearer. These topsheets are typically made of a hydrophobic, non-woven web material, although other materials may be used. One or more pads may be formed in these topsheets to help provide a specific tissue type feel and to make the topsheet more comfortable for the wearer. Conventional topsheets have used a variety of methods to facilitate the flow of air through the topsheet. Breathable topsheets may be made from a spunbonded lyocell material (e.g., those made from material or cellulose such as STYROFOAM.RTM. Lyocell and those made from material or cellulose such as POLYTRION.RTM. Cellulose) or from a non-woven web of a hydrophilic fiber (e.g., those made from a hydrophilic fiber such as POLY/SPUN.RTM./HFP.RTM. Fiber). In addition to breathable topsheets, breathable topsheets may also have an active breathability feature. Active breathability may include breathable soaker holes, breathable gathers, breathable neckline openings, breathable edge gathers, breathable leg cuffs, breathable leg gussets, and breathable waistbands. Breathable topsheets may be pre-made, including breathable and active breathable topsheet components. It may also be desirable to have breathable topsheets that are printed. However, it may be difficult to print breathable topsheets because the areas where the breathable topsheets are printed tend to become permeable.Q: Codeigniter Where f678ea9f9e
